Does the concept of assessment instill a level of uncertainty in you? How do we come to understand the role of documentation and its intended purpose? Documentation has a long history in early years education and provides an important role in making visible the learning that takes place whilst also providing a point of reflection for educators to explore and critique their own teaching. Assessment on the other hand is often seen as a new concept, however it is important to point out that we in early childhood have been and continue to assess children's learning as part of our everyday quality processes. The five part professional learning series will unpack, trouble and even challenge participants to think differently about documentation and assessment.

Learning Circles for eligible children's services are $250.00 for five sessions inclusive.
